Australia a wonderful world!

"I see skies of blue and clouds of white
The bright blessed day and the dark sacred night
The colors of the rainbow, so pretty in the sky
Are also on the faces of people going by
And I think to myself - What a wonderful world!"

I'm sure you have heard this song, made famous by Louis Armstrong. It's a song about Australia – or it could well be!

When I am abroad I often meet young and talented people with a burning desire to prove themselves in a world where they can become whatever they want to be – where they can actually make their dream a reality. I know how valuable those dreams are and I believe in the power of dreams. Australia is that kind of world – I know from my own experience and the experience of the many people I have helped. I have made it my business to help and support anyone and everyone who longs to be in this land of opportunity and dreams – Australia, a wonderful world!

Australia is a world of opportunities! It has a flourishing, sustainable economy with an unmatched lifestyle. It has a progressive and open immigration policy which has attracted thousands of migrants from all over the world. It has federal, state and non-government bodies that assist migrants in settling in and making them feel at home. It has..... I could go on and list so many other positives about Australia.

But, unfortunately, there are negatives too. A huge negative for many would-be migrants is the maze of legal rules and regulations which the government has created to control migration to Australia. To be accepted as a migrant to Australia is not at all easy and not at all simple. In fact, it is very difficult and frustratingly complicated!

To be successful in gaining permanent residence in Australia requires a careful and proper interpretation of migration laws, as well as a detailed understanding of the varied and complex application procedures, a disciplined mind to ensure that the appropriate procedures are applied correctly, and a great deal of patience. Living here is great. Getting permission to live here is a pain!

Surprisingly, another big negative is what people learn about migrating to Australia by word of mouth – by listening to stories.

While it makes sense, as part of your essential initial research, to visit official web sites such as those of the Department of Immigration, individual States and professional agencies like The Migration Agents Registration Authority (The MARA), in the end most people realize they can't do it on their own - they need help. Applying for permanent residence in Australia in such a way that you have a genuine chance of success is something that few people can do on their own. It's a minefield, and most people need help and guidance – the help and guidance that only a qualified – and caring – professional registered migration agent can provide.

You may have heard stories about people who happened to be lucky enough to get the right advice at the right time, but there are far more stories of people who lost out because they got the wrong advice, or because their application was mismanaged, or because of poor undisciplined paperwork. I cannot emphasize enough the importance of accessing the right people in order to get the right advice as well as proper guidance in preparing one's permanent residence application.

On my recent visits to Latin America, Asia and Europe, I was overwhelmed by the number of people who turned up for our presentations on Migrating to Australia. On these visits the question I was asked most often was "Tell me, Juan, who can I trust; I am told different things by different people."

My advice always was – and it always is:

"Talk only to people who you know to be qualified to give advice - just as you would talk to a qualified doctor for advice on your health, or a qualified lawyer, or a qualified accountant. Talk to a qualified – which means "registered" – Migration Agent, someone who is authorized by the Australian Government to give migration advice."

And if you want to make use of the fantastic new opportunity which now exists of gaining permanent residence in Australia after 2 years of study at an Australian higher education institution, my advice to you would be

"Talk to a registered migration agent who is also an accredited Education Agent, because, unfortunately, there are educational institutions as well as many study programs that are not acceptable for permanent residence: you've got to choose carefully and know what you are doing or you'll be wasting 2 years of your life (and a lot of money)!".

Come, explore a whole new world - Australia!

It's a great place to raise a family.

Australia is keen to attract talented people to come and help make this successful country even better.

Australia is

- ✓ a multicultural society that welcomes qualified migrants
- ✓ a country with a high and sustained rate of growth

Australia has

- ✓ a prosperous booming economy
- ✓ low inflation and low interest rates
- ✓ very low unemployment
- ✓ an excellent education system
- ✓ free primary and secondary education
- ✓ reliable inexpensive universal healthcare for residents

Australia offers

- ✓ job opportunities for professionals and trades people
- ✓ opportunities for career change
- ✓ social, political and economic stability
- ✓ a high living standard
- ✓ an excellent climate and a clean environment

I came to Australia in 1995 and fell in love with the country - I knew it was where I wanted to spend the rest of my life!

Being a migrant myself and having worked extensively with Australian universities and government agencies, I have gained first-hand experience and an in-depth understanding of what is involved in the different application processes for the various Australian Visas, as well as being able to relate fully to the concerns people have when they need to apply for an Australian visa.

My staff and I are committed to providing the very best advice and assistance to everyone who wishes to come to Australia to visit, study or settle in this country.
